Royal Adelaide Hospital Royal Adelaide Hospital is a private hospital located on the corner of Robert and George Streets, Adelaide, South Australia. History The hospital first opened in 1845 and was originally known as The Hospital for Women, South Australia. By the time the hospital was rebuilt in 1883 it was called The Seamen's Home and Dispensary. The main building was designed by Peter Sculthorpe and the architect for the renovations of the building was the same architect who designed the Observatory and the Rundle Mall. It was the first of its kind in South Australia, and was designed to cater to health problems of the sailors who visited the port in the city. The hospital was built with two wards and an operating theatre. The wards were designated Male and Female. It later operated as Seamen's Hospital for the next fifty years. In 1919 the hospital turned into The Royal Adelaide Hospital for Women. In 1969 the hospital was closed for four years to repair and modernise facilities. Patients and staff were relocated to the Royal Women's Hospital on the corner of Rundle and East Terrace. In 1975 the hospital was handed over to the Seaview Private Hospital Association. It remained a private hospital until it was rebranded to Royal Adelaide Hospital. Location The hospital is situated at the corner of Robert and George Streets, Adelaide, South Australia. Rooms and services The hospital has a total of 156 patient beds with further 90 beds located in the outpatient centre. The Nursing unit has been renovated and extended. It also has an ICU and a Birthing Suite. Specialties The hospital has a number of specialities, including: Endocrinology Heart Disease Radiology Diabetes Management
